Produced monthly by The Institute for Luxury Home Marketing, this report provides an in-depth look at the top residential markets across the United States and Canada. Within the individual markets, you will find established luxury benchmark prices and detailed survey of luxury active and sold properties designed to showcase current market status and recent trends. The national report illustrates a compilation of the top North American markets to review overall standards and trends.

- LUXURY REPORT EXPLAINED -

The Institute for Luxury Home Marketing has analyzed a number of metrics — including sales prices, sales volumes, number of sales, sales-price-to-list-price ratios, days on market and price-per-square-foot – to provide you a comprehensive North American Luxury Market report.

Additionally, we have further examined all of the individual luxury markets to provide both an overview and an in-depth analysis – including, where data is sufficient, a breakdown by luxury single-family homes and luxury attached homes.

It is our intention to include additional luxury markets on a continual basis. If your market is not featured, please contact us so we can implement the necessary qualification process. More in-depth reports on the luxury communities in your market are available as well.

Looking through this report, you will notice three distinct market statuses, Buyer's Market, Seller's Market, and Balanced Market. A Buyer's Market indicates that buyers have greater control over the price point. This market type is demonstrated by a substantial number of homes on the market and few sales, suggesting demand for residential properties is slow for that market and/or price point.

By contrast, a Seller's Market gives sellers greater control over the price point. Typically, this means there are few homes on the market and a generous demand, causing competition between buyers who ultimately drive sales prices higher.

A Balanced Market indicates that neither the buyers nor the sellers control the price point at which that property will sell and that there is neither a glut nor a lack of inventory. Typically, this type of market sees a stabilization of both the list and sold price, the length of time the property is on the market as well as the expectancy amongst homeowners in their respective communities – so long as their home is priced in accordance with the current market value.

“The VHNW are likely the most influential demographic regarding changing their way of living. The majority of these entrepreneurs and self-made business owners are not only savvy in technology, but have leveraged this infrastructure to establish global businesses. Owing multiple properties, whether it’s just in North America or overseas, has become a new way of living; affording them flexibility and mobility to enjoy their home for both business and pleasure.”

NORTH AMERICAN LUXURY REVIEW

Last month's article focused on a report by Wealth-X¹ that provided information and insights on how they predict the "Wealthy will Fare during 2020." Overall, the report forecast that the global wealthy population would not only continue to grow, but would see an increase in their net worth value.

The report also highlighted that a new generation of wealthy, defined as the Very-High Net Worth (VHNW), had become increasingly significant in their spending power influences. This group, whose net worth is valued between $5-30 million, now commands over 25% of all millionaire's wealth.

In the last 5 years, as well as globally, the demographics of wealth have changed significantly. A new generation of entrepreneurs and business leaders have entered into the rankings and both eastern and western hemispheres are feeling their growing influence on their economies.

Marketing approaches for the wealthy now require a different strategy. In years past, the title of 'millionaire' carried certain expectations for service. In today's world, this expectation is now primarily reserved for Ultra-High Net Worth ($30 Million plus) where you can expect to work with their gatekeepers.

This is why this growing demographic of VHNW could become increasingly more important. While all wealthy individuals have similar character traits, the biggest defining difference in the VHNW demographic is the dominance of self-created wealth, with eight in every ten being self-made.

This difference is important, because unlike their Ultra Wealthy peers, many VHNW individuals are still managing their money and making direct decisions. They tend to be younger, mainly in mid-30s and early 40s, and highly engaged in digital technology, all of which, generally makes them more accessible.

However, as we have stated in previous reports, it is imperative to understand the buying trends of the demographic being targeted. Recognizing the significant shifts in the VHNW's preferences will undoubtedly offer important indicators as to the future demand for luxury real estate.

While there has been a significant increase in wealth, the VHNW have shifted their buying power when it comes to deciding where to purchase their luxury homes. In recent years, there has been a marked change from the intense purchasing of US properties by international buyers, who once flooded the market after the Great Recession of 2008. Instead, they have turned their sights to other locations such as Europe, which is now heavily on their radar. However, this has opened the opportunity for domestic buyers – especially those looking to either diversify their portfolio or move to take advantage of US tax haven states.

Markets with high income and property taxes, such as New York, New Jersey, Chicago, and Los Angeles have, over the last two years, experienced record numbers of residents relocating to destinations that offer little or no income tax and relatively modest property assessments. Texas, Florida, Nevada, Tennessee and Wyoming are the beneficiaries of this migration; with the Bank of America reporting that the adjusted gross income of low-tax states in 2018 increased by $32 billion more than in high-tax states.

The capping of federal income for state and local tax (SALT) deductions at $10,000 had a profound effect on the wealthy, who recognized that increases in tax would be significant. This not only drove this demographic to relocate, but also evaluate the type of property they wished to own, if they decided to keep a foothold in their original market.

The VHNW are likely the most influential demographic regarding changing their way of living. The majority of these entrepreneurs and self-made business owners are not only savvy in technology, but have leveraged this infrastructure to establish global businesses. Owing multiple properties, whether it's just in North America or overseas, has become a new way of living; affording them flexibility and mobility to enjoy their home for both business and pleasure.

The homes of choice have changed – no longer in favor is the single purchase of a large mansion with extensive grounds and expensive management budgets. Instead the requirements for a number of smaller homes, townhomes and/or condos situated with direct accessibility to amenities and transportation, more often located in downtown or hipsturbia areas. This is a generation that desires and will pay handsomely for access to the livability factors, including culture, entertainment, dining and services.

Their homes are typically modern in style, whether this is an older home converted or brand new designer development, and open-concept in its layout. Entertaining is important but not in the formal floor plans of previous years, now it's more informal, a casual yet artfully luxurious use of space and openness.

Luxury is no longer displayed ostentatiously, instead its invested into the home's design with a focus on integrating a sense of wellness and well-being.

The wealthy have recognized that their living and working spaces can greatly affect their moods, energy levels, sleep patterns and productivity. Integrating eco-sensitive, natural elements, and healthy amenities has become an essential requirement. This is reflected in the growing number of sales for these types of custom homes, condo buildings and planned residential communities.

Equally important is home automation, technically savvy the integration of smart-home technology is expected. In 2020, this requirement goes beyond automated lighting, temperature controls, and wireless sound systems. Smart-homes need to be seamless, from wireless security to pre-programmed systems, convenience-focused applications and experiences, as well as remotely controllable.

Convenience and lifestyle are aspects that speak to the wealthy's appreciation of time. In this fast-paced world, homes not only need to be a sanctuary but also offer accessibility to easy living. Spaces have become acceptably multifunctional and multipurpose – recreational rooms are now used as offices, it's easy to put away a laptop or hook it up to a large screen.

Outdoor spaces now reflect the preference of indoor/outdoor living, quite often designed to become a single space once sliding doors disappear into hidden wall spaces. Dining, mini theatres, stunning living spaces, outdoor chef kitchens, fireplaces, co-mingle with decks, patios and balconies that are designed to embrace views or the surrounding landscape.

The overall message from luxury real estate agents working within the VHNW demographic is that these high-end buyers want modern, contemporary homes that are ready to occupy. Luxury homebuyers show very little tolerance for outdated designs and features and will often overlook a property with views for a move-in ready home.

Redevelopment of former rundown or commercial areas is also proving popular – remember the majority of these wealthy individuals are self-starters. They are willing to take a risk on buying in a run-down neighborhood if developers are building luxury communities that meet their requirements. Not only is new construction a big draw for luxury buyers, but so are renovations or older housing stock, such as brownstones or converted commercial buildings.

Finally, it must be recognized that these buyers are starting to settle down, whether its children or furry friends, features that meet demands such as pet walking areas and childcare services are going to be big incentives.

The art of selling and buying in this market needs a critical and analytical approach, understanding the realities and setting expectations accordingly will ensure that goals are achieved. For homeowners looking to sell their luxury home in today's market, we recommend working with a realtor who can capitalize on the preferences of current investors.
